

TUMC

A scanning electron micrograph showing numerous small, white, spherical lymphocytes scattered across a textured, greyish surface. The cells vary in density, with some forming larger clusters and others appearing more isolated.

Scanning Electron Micrograph of Lymphocytes on the Bursa of Fabricius

Basic Sciences

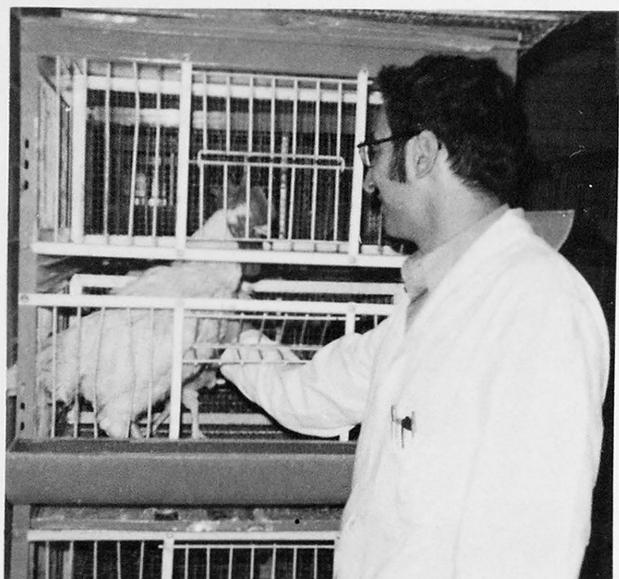

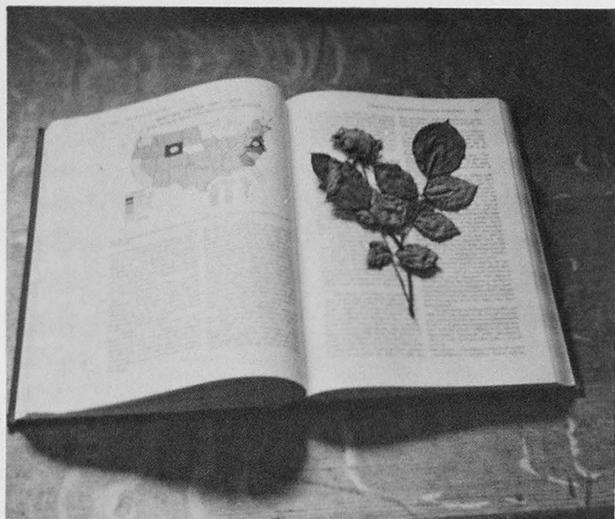

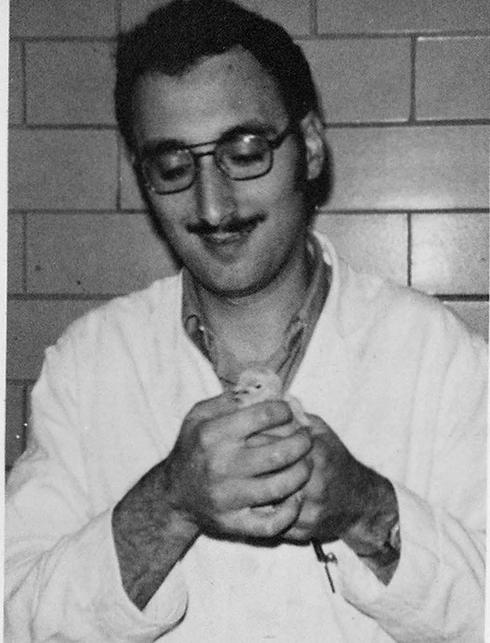

HOW ENTHUSIASTIC we were, yet so quickly disenchanted by: crowded parking lots, dry as bones lectures, equally dry texts, and the routine of the medical sciences.

TOP AND MIDDLE RIGHT, Larry Lehrner does extensive research on chicks . . . and roosters, too.

BOTTOM, Dr. Minton holds another parasitology class spell-bound.

TOP, Carletta Vanderbilt finds that V.A. patients really are dogs.
MIDDLE LEFT, did you notice that form C-22 had to be turned in by April 2 if you plan on graduating?
MIDDLE RIGHT, Norman Stump asks his wife, "Now what do you have to make hair grow on my chest?"
BOTTOM, fly breeding area for L.U.M.C.

(The pictures across the top are progressively higher magnifications of the Bursa of Fabricius. Did you find the lymphocyte trying to sneak across the cell membrane?)

Activities

Continuing Education

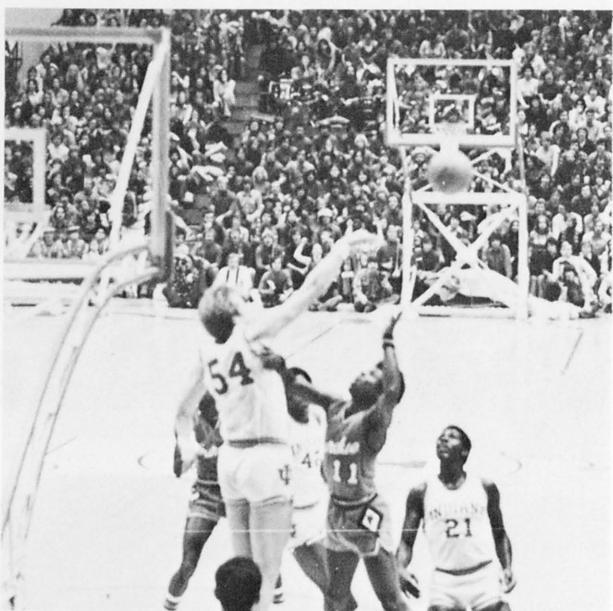

Despite long hours spent on hospital wards, the dedicated class of '76 found additional time to pursue medical knowledge. As pictured here journal clubs, informal lecture groups, and independent scientific research provided needed intellectual stimulation. In addition, emergency room moonlighting brought pay as well as experience. The South Side Clinic traded community service for the opportunity to learn from patients.

LEFT: John Paris with subjects Bob Newman and Jim Linderman at work on an important area of medical research. The results of their work will soon be published in the New England Journal of Medicine under the title-Comparison of Millers and Schlitz in Production of Diuresis by ADH Suppression.

Sports

The class of 1976 members participated in many sporting events, some in organized city and intramural sports, some in sandlot games and some as armchair coaches. The highlight of the sporting year, the Med-Law football game was won this year by these fighting physicians- the IUMC Idopaths.

MIDDLE and LOWER RIGHT-Indiana Hoosiers, the nations number one ranked college basketball team battles Purdue for the Big Ten Conference lead.

Social Events

Medical school provided a vast array of social events ranging from the SAMA fall party to the AMSA fall party. Indianapolis, the midwest culture center, had both an art museum and an art theater. And when all else failed, there was still a can of beer and the tube.
